A NEW JAPANESE SOCIETY

It is a pleasure to announce the formation of a new Japanese society, under the name of the Japanese Association, with headquarters at 60 Wall Street, New York City. The president is the well-known scientist, Dr. Jokichi Takamine, and the first vice-president, Mr. Reitaro Ichinomiya, the president of the New York Branch of the Yokohama Specie Bank. The objects of the association, according to its announcement, are to foster friendship and cordial coöperation among the Japanese residing in New York and vicinity, to uplift the character of every member, to promote their social and intellectual welfare, to safeguard their rights, to cultivate among them the spirit of mutual assistance, and to strengthen the friendly ties that bind the peoples of the Empire of Japan and the United States of America.
